Um dos maiores atrativos do Sharp na CES 2015 foi a apresentação da linha de televisores AQUOS, a qual é dotada do sistema operacional Android TV. Em exposição estava o Smart Central 4.0, que consiste na interface da plataforma da Google dentro das TVs da Sharp. Uma das coisas que mais chamou nossa atenção foi o controle remoto do televisor, possuindo um visual bem diferenciado — como os botões mais usados localizados na parte inferior enquanto no centro fica uma espécie de trackpad para facilitar o acesso a menus e recursos da plataforma. A televisão também tem suporte a comandos de voz para pesquisas de aplicativos ou canais, além de ser compatível com joysticks para proporcionar jogatinas mais práticas e cómodas. Embora o modelo disponibilizado no estande não contasse com muitos apps e games apenas demonstrativos, pudemos perceber que o sistema é bastante fácil de mexer e ele apresentou transições muito fluidas. A série AQUOS contará com versões que vão de 50 a 80 polegadas e é esperada nas lojas norte-americanas ainda no primeiro semestre de 2015. Os valores ainda não foram confirmados pela Sharp. Sharp AQUOS 65" 4K UHD Android TV - 4TC65CK1X It's the age of 4K now, which bigger and brighter 4K TVs have effectively replaced full HD TVs with four times as many pixels. 4K TV has now become the standard type of TV for buyers, come in various sizes and specifications that fulfill your specific needs. Thus, this blog contains the knowledge you need to know about a 4K TV. Based on dummies.com, a 4K TV is an emerging technology with a resolution of 3,840 x 2,160 pixels, which is 8 million pixels in total. The pixels of a 4K TV is four times the number of Full HD or 2K (1,920 x 1,080). A 4K TV is also known as Ultra HD or UHD and works more effectively on a larger screen. The resolution and the latest picture processing technology make more precise and astounding 4K images. The result is a stunning clarity that makes all images come to life. Screen resolution is the key difference between a 4K and 2K (Full HD) TV. Meanwhile, the resolution is differed by the number of pixels. A pixel is the smallest digital graphic unit displayed and represented on a device. These pixels are organized into rows and columns. The resolution will define how many pixels there are in each row (width) and each column (height). Pixels of 2K and 4K TVs: 2K or Full HD: 1920 x 1080 4K or Ultra HD (UHD): 3840 x 2160 So, a Full HD TV with a 1920 x 1080 resolution means that it displays 1920 pixels per line and 1080 per column. We usually refer to a 2K resolution as 1080P. Meanwhile, a 4K TV displays 3840 pixels per line and 2160 per column. Let's keep it simple—the more pixels mean the better display quality for the viewing experience. Colors The extra pixels of 4K TVs help them outperform the 1080P in terms of color displayed. 4K TVs can achieve a wider color gamut, offering a more extensive palette of colors than a 1080P TV. A 4K TV screen can also display a more accurate depth with exceptional contrast between light and dark than a Full HD TV. With the feature of that, 4K TVs could supply lifelike images that look almost the same in reality. Also, 4K is now a preferable way to look for HDR or Ultra HD (UHD) features. Devices Full HD TVs were once the most common type of HDTV set with a screen resolution of 1080P. Computer monitors or laptop screens are widely available in 1080P. Thus, we can say that Full HD TV resolutions on smaller screen devices make more sense. This is because screens at 40° and below are not large enough for 4K to look noticeably clearer or sharper. Content YouTube, Android TV and other marks and logos are trademarks of Google LLC. In addition, we can differentiate Full HD TV and 4K TVs based on their availability and content. Almost all streaming platforms support Full HD TV content in the past, but major streaming platforms like Netflix, Amazon Prime, and YouTube have already joined the 4K team now. Picture quality—Resolution A 4K display reveals so much more nuances and detail. You will be more like "gazing through a window" instead of watching a TV due to their realistic image quality displayed. Also, the higher pixel density of a 4K TV also enables you to get much closer without the grid-like structure of the image itself becoming visible—this means you can comfortably watch a much larger screen from the same seating position as your current Full HD panel. Sharp AQUOS 60" 4K UHD Android TV - 4TC60AHX1X Simply put, 4K TV is designed to bring the sorts of things you enjoy on your phone to your TV. Although we are now firmly in the modern era, we are not all watching 4K content. Full HD images on a 4K panel will not look better, just bigger, however, unless some clever upsizing is used. But now, with 4K TV's Upconverter technology, it can convert your SD or HD videos into 4K resolution, producing superior image quality. The upscaling process ensures that the image or video fills the screen's 4K resolution. Streaming services - Netflix, Amazon Prime Video and YouTube We can see that many industry leaders are making the 4K switch now. More famous platforms such as Netflix, Amazon Prime Video, YouTube and many more content are available in 4K resolutions, and more platforms are expected to join the team soon. If you want the best image, video, and audio quality, you need to watch them in 4K resolutions. Streamed 4K movies can bring you to the next level of watching experience. Also, the movie is sharper in fine details, has fewer distracting artifacts, and has a better overall image. On the audio side, even streaming content uses compressed audio formats, but in 4K, it will deliver to your lossless audio for enhanced clarity. 4K Upconverter Sharp 4K Upconverter can convert your SD or HD videos into 4K resolution, producing superior image quality. 4K Digital Noise Reduction This technology maintains clear image quality by reducing the undesirable pixelation that occurs during upconversion. Better color reproduction SHARP TVs are notable with better color reproduction to those naturally detected by the human eye, resulting in actual color. Tone Optimizer A tone optimizer gives natural color tones by providing you with 64 times more color levels when compared to regular displays. 4K U HDR Real Contrast Pictures display superb and accurate depth and exceptional contrast between light and dark, delivering a nuanced picture.
